Jordan's Story

Jordan River Anderson was a First Nations child from Norway Cree House Nation in Manitoba.

He was born in 1999 with complex medical needs that could not be treated on-reserve. Since the provincial and federal governments could not agree on who would cover the costs for Jordan's in-home care, he was unnecessarily kept in the hospital for over two years.

He passed away in 2005, never having the opportunity to live with his family and loved ones in his community.

What is Jordan's Principle?

Jordan's Principle was created in response to this tragedy. This principle ensures that First Nations youth and children can access any products, supports and services they need, when they need them, without facing inequities.

Services Provided

- Assisting families with the application process to access needed services
- Coordinating services for children approved for services or supports through Jordan's Principle

Jordan's Principle may provide assistance with:

- Education
- Mental Health
- Medical Equipment
- Speech Therapy
- ... and more
