JORDAN'S PRINCIPLE

WHAT WE DO

FHQ Jordan's Principle team assists families in accessing needed services through Jordan's Principle application and case management with regional focal points, for families both on- and off-reserve.

SCOPE OF WORK

The team case plans and coordinates services for children approved for service through Jordan's Principle or other government services. The team manages funds for families and builds relationships with families and service providers.

JORDAN'S STORY

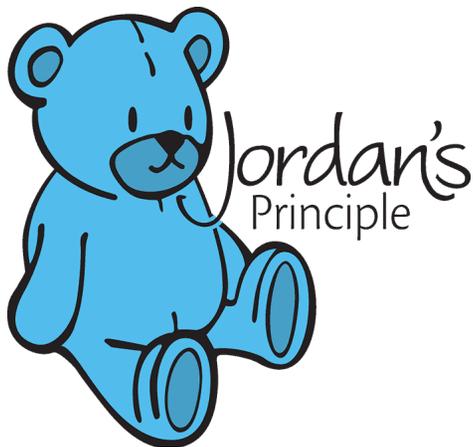

Jordan River Anderson was a First Nations child from Norway Cree House Nation in Manitoba.

He was born in 1999 with complex medical needs that could not be treated on-reserve. Since the provincial and federal governments could not agree on who would cover the costs for Jordan's in-home care, he was unnecessarily kept in the hospital for over two years.

He passed away in 2005, never having the opportunity to live with his family and loved ones in his community.

WHAT IS JORDAN'S PRINCIPLE?

Jordan's Principle was created in response to this tragedy. This principle ensures that First Nations youth and children can access any products, supports and services they need, when they need them, without facing inequities.
